James Allen works with emerging growth companies, investors and entrepreneurs as strategic counsel for a variety of transactional matters. His practice encompasses entity formations, venture capital financings, debt offerings, corporate governance, securities issuances, equity compensation matters and mergers and acquisitions. He regularly drafts, negotiates and advises on complex corporate transactions, contracts and partnerships and utilizes legal technologies to drive efficiency and better outcomes for his clients. James represents a diverse set of companies and investors in the software, technology, digital media, consumer products, fintech and real estate and construction sectors. Prior to becoming a lawyer, James clerked for the United States Senate and worked in business strategy and process improvement roles for a Forbes 200 privately-owned company (America's Largest Private Companies).
