Andrew is head of Cooley's white collar defense and investigations group. A highly acclaimed former federal prosecutor, he's known for his role serving as the chief of the public corruption unit at the US Attorney's Office for the Southern District of New York, where he led numerous high-profile prosecutions. Andrew defends companies and individuals before government agencies and in high-stakes litigation, leads complex and sensitive internal investigations, and has successfully tried significant white collar and regulatory matters.

Recognized by Chambers USA as a top white collar and government investigations lawyer, Andrew draws extensive praise from his peers and clients. Clients describe him as "an incredible thinker" with "killer instincts" and a "strategic mind," and "an extraordinarily effective advocate" who "exudes credibility with judges, clients and counsel based on his dedication to understanding cases from all angles." Andrew routinely represents clients in bet-the-company government investigations by the DOJ, the US Securities and Exchange Commission, state attorneys general, and other regulatory entities in matters involving financial fraud, bribery, false claims, bid-rigging, trade secrets, foreign corrupt practices, money laundering and sanctions violations.

As head of the SDNY public corruption unit, Andrew spearheaded numerous high-profile cases, including:

- The convictions of the former Speaker of the New York State Assembly, a case Andrew personally tried and argued on appeal, and the former Majority Leader of the New York Senate
- Corruption investigations involving the president of the United Nations and top officials at the New York City Police Department, the National Collegiate Athletic Association and Rikers Island correctional facility
- Multiple successful prosecutions brought under the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act, including two of the first FCPA trial convictions in the past decade

Andrew is a visiting professor at the University of Virginia School of Law and has served as a guest lecturer at Yale Law School, Stanford Law School, George Washington University Law School, and the University of Pennsylvania Law School.

Before becoming a lawyer, Andrew was a staff writer at Time magazine. He clerked for US District Judge Sidney H. Stein in the US District Court for the Southern District of New York and US Circuit Judge Chester J. Straub in the US Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.
